

Sometimes in life you meet someone who doesn't think like everyone else, their priorities are different than the rest of us. They don't care about popularity or being cool and fitting in, they just care about helping others and lifting others up.

In my life that person is my Buddy Kody.

Kody has been a special boy from the very beginning, he has had to try twice as hard as everyone else to keep up. I always thought that it bothered Kody that he didn't keep up with his peers in school and physical development, but I don't think he even noticed because he is too busy looking for opportunities to help others.

It comes as no surprise, that Kody has so many friends and that so many people of all ages call him their Buddy.

Recently as I was with him in the ICU and telling him a story, he could tell that I was having a hard time with everything, he lifted his arms as high as he could with the restraints on them, and mouthed the words "hug" he couldn't talk because of the breathing tube going into his lungs. That hug wasn't for him it was for me.

This little man is my hero, even when he is at a very low point, he is still able to think of others.

The world can be a strange place, there are a lot of unknowns and uncertainty.

If you want to escape the chaos and uncertainty of the world today, just be like Kody.

Look for someone else that is in need of a pickup or a smile, and reach out to them. It will bless your life as you bless theirs, and you will forget about the outside world, even if it is just for a short time.
